We need to set up a computer station out in the shop where employees can have access to it. To get into twiki so they can enter comments or read the quality manual or we also can figure out some kind of system where employees can put information in about a part that should be machined differently....for example a part might have holes for a name plate on the assembly drawing but not on the part drawing.

<Good idea! We've talked about this in the management meeting before.>
